And day by day the dead leaves fall and melt."—William Allingham*

Warm thoughts

Colder weather won't keep you out of the saddle when you bundle up in jackets made for riding.

With a longer length for more coverage, the wind- and waterproof Mountain Horse Forest Rider jacket (suggested retail, $120), from English Riding Supply, features double riding vents, armpit zippers for ventilation, a two-way front zipper with a storm flap, articulated sleeves with prebent elbows, reflective details, a drawstring waist and a detachable drawstring hood that stows away in the collar. Available in unisex sizes from XS to XXL, in royal red and navy. To find a retailer, go to www.englishridingsupply.com.

With soft fleece on the inside and a durable outer layer to repel dirt, wind and water, the Rideoutside vest (suggested retail, $89), from Kerrits Performance Equestrian Apparel, features a figure-flattering shape with a long profile to cover the hips. It also has a two-way front zipper and concealed side-zip pockets. Available in sizes from S to XL, in stone, stone grid, dapple grid and black. Call (800) 274-7946 or go to www.kerrits.com.

Metallic threads add an iridescent finish to the Gersemi Blenda jacket (suggested retail, $230), distributed by Equi-Imports. The waterproof jacket also features ventilation zips under the arms, side zips for a more comfortable seat in the saddle and ample pockets sized for gloves, a cell phone, treats and other items. Available in sizes from XS to XL, in rosewood, wood or airforce. Call (888) 465-9725 or go to www.equi-imports.com.

Designed for barn chores as well as for riding, the Eous trench coat (suggested retail, $129.99), from Equisupplies, features cantle and pommel flaps to keep the saddle covered and dry, straps to keep the coat secure around the legs while riding, a two-way front zipper with a storm flap and multiple exterior and interior pockets, including one with a concealed hole for a headphone cord. A concealable, detachable hood includes a removable faux-fur lining. Available in sizes from XS to XXL, in black and mocha. Call (888) 825-0061 or visit www.equisupplies.com.
